THE MAGIC CITY. A Great Religious Revival-The Proposed Hospital.

ROANOKE, VA., October 29.-(Special.) Roanoke is just now in the midst of a great religious revival, and in all parts of the city protracted meetings are being held. A few weeks ago S. R. Crockett aged 19 years, was converted, and at once began evangelistic work. He began with out-door meetings, and met with great success. He was then engaged by Rev. Dr. T. C. The meetings have been in progress about two weeks and the boy preacher, as he is called, has been in oreacher, as he is called, has been in-trumental in the conversion of over-seventy-five people. They flock to hear-him, and the church cannot begin to ac-commodate the crowds. His meeting will continue indefinitely. He is regarded by many of the pastors here as a religious vendor.

BERRYVILLE.

The Luck of Two of Mosby's Men-Briefs.

BERRYVILLE, VA., October 29,-(Special.)-Mr. W. G. Conrad, the millionaire banker, of Great Falls, Mont., who is prominently mentioned as a candidate for the United States Senate from that State, is a native of this county, and has a summer home near White Post, where he, with his family, spends a portion of each year. Mr. Conrad is a son of Major James Conrad, and was born near White Post Conrad, and was born near white Post ifty-three years ago. When the civil war commenced he enlisted in the cavalry, finally becoming one of Mosby's Rangers, and served with much gallantry to the end as a private, participating in nearly every engagement that famous command had with the Federals. After the war he with his brother and now business with his brother and now busin partner, emigrated to Montana, the two carrying their worldly possessions on their backs. Now, after years of toil that would have disheartened men of a differ-ent calibre, they are among the wealthlest and most honored citizens of that State-bankers at Great Falls and at Kalispiell, and in addition, large owners of cattle and real estate.

A staff correspondent of the Minneapo-A staff correspondent of the Minneapo-lis Journal thus writes of Mr. William G. He was one of the heaviest stockholders in the Northwestern Na-tional Bank, of Great Falls, but just prior to its failure through the speculations of tional Bank, of Great Paragraph of the speculations of its cashier, B. EXCHANGE OF OLD BOOKS. If Good Enough to Use, Good Enough to Exchange.

The Department of Public Instruction has had considerable trouble with many book dealers throughout the State as to what old books may be exchanged for

In order to inform dealers and parents In order to inform dealers and parents of children having books which have been superseded by new ones, the following circular on this subject has been issued:

Department of Public Instruction, Richmond, Va., October 25, 1898.

To County and City Superintendents and County and City School Joards:

Much missanyananalers in the county of the county and City School Joards:

County and City School loarus: Much misapprehension ppears to pre-vail in the minds of many school officials valid in the minds of many school officials and book dealers touching the exchange of old books for new ones, in conse quence of which it is deemed expedien to issue this circular of information. In making contracts with publishers he State Board of Education required them to sell and satisfactorily to supp to the pupils of the public schools of the State, for a period of four years, be-ginning August 1, 1898, certain books at the prices named in the printed pamphlet which has been sent to all the superin indents, trustees, and teachers, and, a ar as possible, to the book dealers.

In this pamphlet two prices are named one being the retail price at which the books are to be sold to the pupils, the other the exchange price at which the pupils will be enabled to secure new books by delivering to the dealers books of the same grade previously authorized for use in the public schools of Virginia.

As to what condition old books offered for exchange should be in, it is impossible to lay down any exact rule. In general terms, however, it is safe to say that any book that is in such condition that it may be used by a pupil for one session is good enough to be exchanged.

The impression prevails in some sections that the State Board, in adopting books and making contracts with the publishers, did not contemplate that ex-changes would take place where sweeping changes were not made. This is entirely erroneous. The State Board holds that xchanges should be made wherever ex changeable books are offered, whether they are many or few.

This department also holds that it is the duty of all publishers having con-tracts with the State Board to instruct Il Virginia dealers purchasing public-chool books from them to use all dili-ence in effecting exchanges of old books or new ones. In this way alone can fric-ion and trouble be avoided. The period aring which the old books may be offered schange for the new ones should coin with the period during which the old books are permitted to be used.

Without his brace, however, he is almost helpless. The brace, however, he is almost helpless. The special advantages of Mr. Hill's invention will prove a blessing to the afflicted ones who have to wear a brace, and to thou-sands of others who need them, but are deterred from using them by ason of the unsightliness, inconvenience, and dis-brace dispenses with the shank-stirru; altogether, and is not fastened permanently to the shoe. The wearer can re move it instantly and put it on another shoe when a change is desired, and thus have a pair of shoes for each day in the week, if he wishes, but only one brace. It has no ankle joints to wear loose and chafe the ankle—in fact, it cannot come in contact with the ankle. Its weight ranges from four to eight ounces, where other braces run up into pounds. The one orn by Mr. Hill weighs ten ounces. Mr. Hill's invention has been favorably and flatteringly criticised by some of the most prominent physicians of this city and other parts of the State. He has been urged to go to New York or Philadelphia to put his invention on the market, but on account of his wife's health, he prefers to make Richmond his home and have the work done here.

"He loved to teach. He seemed born unto the high vocation. But his love for teaching was not greater than his love for teachers. The choicest room in his heart was set apart for his fellow-craftsmen. He needed no introduction to any man or woman who came to the Saturday afternoon meeting. "We be brethren," he taught, by precept and example. He loved us out of an abundant heart, and rejoiced in it. He prized the fact of his love for the brethren as one of the evidences of his acceptance with God."

The Lion Among the Flowers. (Temple Bar.)

Here, in this garden nook alone, alone,
Lies an old lion of gray stone—
Once, in the long gone golden hours,
A lordly lion, proud in state.

The guardian of a mansion gate—
Now he lies low among the flowers.

Then oft he saw the shining doors,
Heard light feet fall on festal floors,
Heard music wake his witching din;
The dance beneath the torches' blaze
The knights and ladies of old days.
While he watched over all within.

Now he lies in his old age Cast out, rejected, by the rage Of time a downbeaten, broken, scarred— An old gray lion; yet not less A lion in his feebleness!— One thing is left him still to guard. He guards it well, by night and day, In those great paws of granite gray, In the strong sheiter of his breast; No man shall serve him yet with scorn, Though an old lion, thus forlorn, And all he guards—a robin's nest!

How to Keep Young. (Scottish American.)

The ever-youthful appearance of the

The ever-youthful appearance of the members of the dramatic profession is a constant source of surprise to the public at large. The reason for this is not so much the grease paint necessary in making up, which obliterates, to a certain extent, the natural wrinkles of the skin, while it lubricates and nourishes it, but it is due to the changs in the expression of the various emotions which every part demands. This causes the actress to bring into play all the muscles ess to bring into play all the muscles of the face. By using them equally they ill maintain their firm consistency and trength, and none waste away from disstretched and tense over the face, and does not fall into hollows. A blow of fresh air, a glimpse of fresh scenes, and fresh faces, are worth quarts of dectors' tonics to an overtired and nervous wotonics to an overtired and hervous wo-man, and give a prettier glow to the cheeks than the finest manufactured rouge in existence. It is indolence and lazy habits that allow obesity to gain the as-cendency over the elasticity in the fair sex. She who keeps her mind and body on the alert will seldom need to have recourse to science or diet to decrease her on the alert will be a seen as a construction of the size and weight. If you have a thin face, and the flesh seems unwilling to become plump and round in reasonse to massage, build up the system by taking a half pint or more of sweet cream every day, eat of cereals which may have been cooked for several hours, a raw egg beaten up in milk once every day, warm drinks of milk diluted with hot water, drinks of milk diluted with hot water, and baked sweet apples or ripe sweet fruit at each meal.
